About Dancers Connect

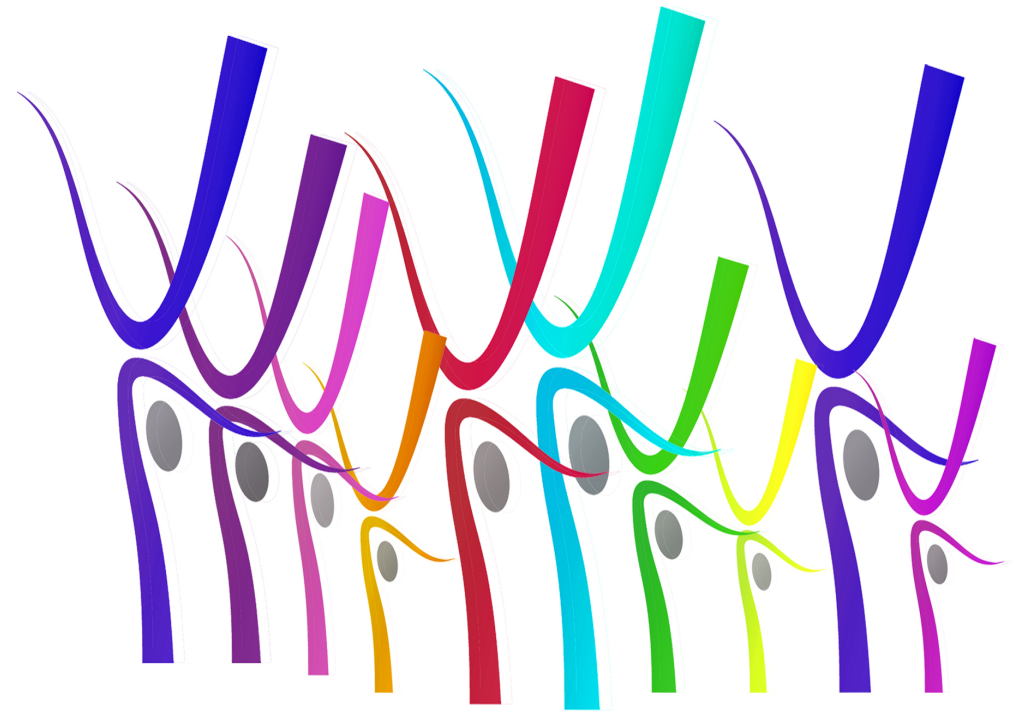

In Spring 2013 Dr. Mila Parrish launched Dancers Connect (DC), a free community dance program for students age 7 to 14 at The University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Originally developed by Parrish at the University of South Carolina, the DC program focuses on creativity, self-expression, imagination, improvisation, choreography and performance. DC Classes promote the physical and emotional well being of the child, develop critical thinking and creative problem solving skills and celebrate dance as a unique medium for expression, understanding, cooperation, and communication of ideas. The function of DC is two-fold. First, DC is a community program where school aged students can receive quality dance instruction in creative dance, ballet, modern, jazz, and hip hop dance styles and to create choreography and perform dances on campus at no cost to them. Second, DC functions as a laboratory classroom and a practicum teaching opportunity for dance students. The DC partnership breaks down walls of exclusivity that are often found in dance training by creating a type of creative arts laboratory where all members take risks and learn from one another.
